THE TERROIR

The village of Mercrey is situated in the heart of the Côte Chalonnaise and is one of the largest winegrowing appellations of Burgundy. The vines grow at altitudes between 230 and 320 metres in limestone-marl soils on slopes facing the midday sun. Mercrey benefits from cooler climatic conditions than the Côte de Beaune, thus ripening is later but cellaring potential is very good.

DID YOU KNOW?

Although it was first declared an appellation in 1923, the origins of Mercrey lie much further back in history. In fact it was the Romans who planted the first vines in the area. They also built a temple dedicated to Mercury, who, in addition to his role as the messenger of the gods of ancient Rome, was also the god of commerce and travel.
